

A Salvediction from the Provost

Here is an imaginative approach to publication that perfectly reflects UCL's ethos of the past 180 years. Unpretentious, intellectually uncompromising, wide-ranging in its scope and vision, and above all, interesting. It hasn't been brought together by an international publishing house with a board of distinguished editors drawn from prestigious universities. None of it. It's been done for the joy of it by a group of dedicated UCL graduate students, and it has all the liveliness and immediacy you would expect. I welcome it with enormous pleasure and look forward to reading future instalments for years to come.
